“Dishes did not get done, supper did not get cooked. This book was like a drug. I had to know what happened.” Amazon Reviewer

Description:

Cody Garrett, a former Navy SEAL, has never met a skirt he didn't fancy. His six-pack, rugged looks and bad boy image ensures a steady stream of hot babes.

So, he is confused when Bridie Barker refuses to go on a date with him.

It's not like she's a stunning beauty or something. According to him, her ears are big, she's well-rounded and she's not even a D-cup.

In spite of her shortcomings, the more she pushes him away, the more he finds himself thinking of her.

Twenty-year-old Bridie Barker has control issues. Every detail in her life is planned.

Her closet is color-coded and she has an array of storage containers, to ensure that everything is in its correct place.

Her whole world is black and white, and grey areas are a no-no.

When she meets the warm and grounded Scott Garrett, she thinks she has found her soul mate.

Unfortunately, and to her disappointment, things don't pan out with Scott.

While waiting tables, she has a disastrous run-in with his brother, Wild Boy Cody Garrett, King of Body Shots, who parties every night with a different girl.

Even though he's good to look at and makes her laugh, she turns down his advances as he's clearly the tag-and-release kind of guy.

Besides, she is pretty sure he owns not a single storage container, and she's certain that his closet is not color-coded.

Problem is, Cody Garrett finds her rejection an aphrodisiac and pursues her.

This contemporary romance and steamy novel from Eve Rabi is a riveting drama of love gone wrong. It will keep you in suspense, keep you turning pages and leave you begging for more.

“If you want something different than the traditional romance, pick this book up and I promise you will not stop reading.” Amazon reviewer

Warning: sex scenes, violence, racial themes and coarse language.

EXCERPT

My urge to destroy returned with a vengeance. I turned my Hummer around.

“Where you going to, Cody?” my mother demanded, her voice frantic.

I didn't answer, but hit the gas and gunned the Hummer toward Bridie's old place.

“Cody, where are you going?” my dad demanded.

I stared ahead as I floored it.

“Cody, just stop!” Jenna said. “I know where you're going! You stop right now, Cody!”

Ignoring all their pleas, I drove on until I pulled up into the parking lot outside Bridie's old place.

Just in time – I spotted her standing outside Scott's Roadster in the parking lot.

Scott was still in the driver's seat, talking on his phone.

I braked and without killing the engine, I hopped out of my Hummer.

Within seconds, my family was running behind me, pleading with me to leave them alone.

Bridie spotted me first. “Cody!” she mouthed, fear in her eyes.

I picked up a brick from the side of the road and walked toward Scott.

“Cody!” Bridie screamed. “What are you doing? STOP!”

I ignored her and walked over to my brother. I was going to smash his skull with the brick until his brains lay all over his Roadster.

His window was opened. Good. When he saw me above him, brick high up in the air, ready to hit him with it, he dropped his phone.

I raised the brick to smash it down his face.

His eyes grew large.

“CODY, NO!” Bridie screamed.

When I looked into Scott’s eyes, I wavered.

He stared, I glared.

I willed myself to do it, to kill Scott.
